Have you ever heard of Article the First—Our Original First Right?

Most Americans know the ten amendments we call the Bill of Rights. Far fewer know that the First Congress originally proposed twelve Articles.

Article the Second was finally ratified more than two centuries later.
Through the persistence of Gregory Watson, it became the 27th Amendment in 1992.

But what happened to the first Article?
Article the First addressed something fundamental to our Constitutional Republic:

REPRESENTATION.

Article the First proposed a framework for the House of Representatives to grow with the population—helping preserve a closer relationship between the people and those elected to represent them.

What did representation mean to the Founders—and what could Article the First mean for We the People today?
